BOYS WIN HONORS IN STOCK JUDGING AT NEBRASKA STATE FAIR.

Lincoln County Stock Judging Team won fourth place at the State Fair in competition with 13 teams and George Koch of Hershey was 6th as individual judge in competition with 39 judges. Lincoln County was 14 points under 3d place, 20 under 2nd, and 66 points under 1st place in a possible score of 1200 points. George Koch of Hershey won 1014 points, James Rosse of Maxwell 961 and Owen Powell of Sutherland 990 points.

This being the first year of Club work and the first experience of the boys in this work makes us well pleased with the results. The close placing shows that all the boys were working hard and should be able to do better next year. Manley Rasmussen of Maxwell was with them as alternate. George Kellogg coached them and the Farm Bureau pays expenses.

The building at 507 Dewey, owned by Minor Hinman and until recently occupied by George Razes' shoe shining parlor, is being remodeled and the rear extended to the alley. It will then be a full-sized store room. It is said to have been engaged by some local parties for a grocery store but this is not certain.

OF INTEREST TO RURAL READERS

FARM BUREAU NEWS SERVICE SUPPLIES ITEMS FOR THE TRIBUNE READERS

According to U. S. Farmers' Bulletin 1175, corn yields can be increased more surely by the use of better seed than in any other way. Seed corn should be selected in the field from stalks which yield best in equal competition with others. Generally speaking, the seed corn that produces the best is the cheapest. Farmers are justified in devoting considerable time to selecting and caring for it or in paying good prices for better seed corn is purchased. Ask the College of Agriculture or the agricultural extension agent in your county for this bulletin.

During the season just past, stinking smut (or bunt) of wheat has in some sections of Nebraska caused a crop loss running as high as 25 per cent. This loss may be greatly reduced by treatment of seed wheat before planting. A few pints of Formalin, a few gallons of water, and a few hours labor combine into an excellent insurance policy. Detailed instruction, printed on a card convenient to carry in the pocket or tack on the wall of the granary, may be secured by asking the College of Agriculture at Lincoln or the agricultural extension agent in your county for circular 113.

During the last three months the poultry specialists and extension agents of the College of Agriculture have held poultry culling demonstrations in 218 Nebraska communities. In the course of these demonstrations more than 4200 non-layers were identified and separated from the layers, and the people present were shown how to do the same thing for themselves with their own flocks. Folks who did not get to attend a culling demonstration can secure an illustrated bulletin of which the third edition is now being printed. Ask the College or the agricultural extension agent in your county for bulletin 65, "How to select the Good Layers."

The engineering specialists of the College of Agriculture are co-operating with the Swanton school board in a demonstration which will be of interest to country and village schools. The Swanton school of 150 pupils has no had any modern sanitary conveniences. Plans prepared by the College of Agriculture and now being executed by the Swanton board will give the school building complete water supply and sewage disposal systems. A large septic tank is being constructed and modern toilet rooms connected with it. An air-pressure water system is also in process of installation. Other schools that may be interested in something of this sort should consult the agricultural extension agents in their respective counties.

At this season of the year when we are expecting pullets to mature for egg production, it must be remembered that nothing retards maturity more effectively than lice and mites. All seven kinds of lice found on hens can be readily controlled by applying sodium fluorides by the "pinch method." A pinch of sodium fluoride is rubbed into the skin under each wing, on the back, on the neck, on the breast, on each thigh, and around the vent. Mites live in the cracks and in dark corners of the hen house and crawl upon the hens at night, suck blood from them, and return to their hiding place in the daytime. They can be controlled by cleaning the house well and spraying with kerosene, crude oil or stock dip. The oil cylinder oil from the crank case of a tractor or automobile mixed with one-fourth kerosene and sprayed into all cracks and crevices in the houses, nests and coops will control them. For further information on this subject get U. S. Farmers' Bulletin 801 from the College of Agriculture or the agricultural extension agent in your county.

Steps are expected to be taken at a meeting of the Nebraska Agricultural Council to be held in Lincoln during the state fair looking to the organization in Nebraska of a farmers' finance corporation, probably along lines similar to the corporation recently organized in Iowa. H. D. Lute, secretary of the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation has been making an investigation along the lines of local farm credits for some time. The Nebraska Agricultural Council is composed of representatives of each of the Nebraska farm organizations and it is hoped to get these organizations solidly behind the state farmers finance corporation. The Iowa corporation is capitalized for five million dollars with one million dollars paid up capital stock. The stock is divided equally between farmers and bankers and also equally distributed among the ninety-nine Iowa counties. The purpose is to loan money on real estate, live stock, and warehouse receipts to farmers exclusively through red-accounts, which will enable banks to turn their money repeatedly which is turn will mean a widening circle of credit to the grower.

When H. D. Lute secretary of the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation was in Washington recently attending the grain rate hearing, he was in consultation with heads of the federal bureau of markets in regard to the proposed use of wireless telephones for the spreading of market and crops reports to the rural homes and communities. Mr. Lute was particularly interested in the claims made that a low price wireless telephone receiving equipment has not yet been perfected. This report, Mr. Lute was advised, is not well founded. Federal bureau market officials told him that such instruments have absolutely been perfected. However, he was advised that there is a squabble between the Westinghouse Company and the General Electric Company over certain patent rights. These differences it was also said would soon be adjusted and it is probable that these cheaper wireless telephone instruments will be obtainable in quantities late this fall. Mr. Lute was also advised that the bureau of markets feel that weather conditions late in the fall or early in the winter are better for the radio experimental work than the present hot temperature which causes a higher static condition.

Shoe Gossip

There's certainly a lot to talk about when the subject is Fall Shoe Styles. For Fashion permits wonderful latitude. It really seems as though "any style" is good if it is pretty and comfortable.

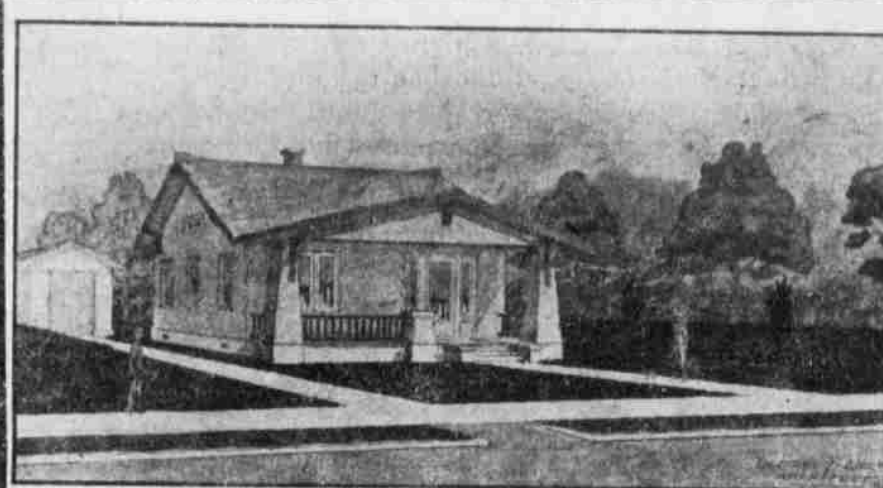

Yet there are two definite divisions—one the walking shoes which show much individuality in decoration, though clinging to low or medium heels; the other the novelty styles, among which beautiful strapped effects dominate.

Black patent leather is very popular, and—but why try to tell you all in an ad. 'Tis better far for you to stop in and see these beautiful new Fall Styles, then you can judge which are best for you.

When an architect undertakes to plan and design something in the way of a suitable small house or bungalow he takes pride in his efforts in order that he may work out something that is a credit to a community so far as the design and the practical planing of the building is concerned.

We have in the the above picture an all modern stucco bungalow of five rooms and bath with breakfast room off kitchen and dining room, built in cabinets in kitchen, large closets in connection to bedrooms. It is heated with an Arcola hotwater heating system which is placed in the rear entry.

This bungalow can be built for approximately $3500.00. Complete plans and specifications for this bungalow are on file at the office of
